A BLOODY DEED.

A Beranged Mother Kills Her Three Children and Attempts to Kill Her Husband.

Terrible Sequel to the Coopers' Long Strike in Brooklyn.

The Woman's Narrative of the Tragedy.

Brooklyn (Eastern District) was yesterday the cene of a bloody transaction, which caused the nost intense excitement among the people resident in that section of the city. The occurrence was one of unparalleled atrocity, involving the sacince of the lives of three innocent infants and the probable death of their tather. The murderess is young woman, who has borne an excellent repuation among her neighbors for her ever apparent maternal devotion to the children whose lives she took in a moment of frenzy or morbid impulse The circumstance which led to the act is supposed o have been acute mental tribulation, superinduced by the refusal of her husband to seek work and supply the wants of their offspring. On the other hand, it would seem that, while he entertained a due degree of affection for his wife and children, he was also bound down by the claims of his fellow trades unionists, whom he had not the courage to set at defiance and act independently in the interest of his family, preferring rather that his family iould suffer privations for a time than that he should break faith with the society. The parties in the tragedy alinded to were Michael Dwyer, out forty years of age, a cooper by trade; his wife, Margaret Dwyer, twenty-eight years of age, and their three children, Margaret, aged seven years; James, aged four years, and fimothy, two years old. Michael Dwyer, who is a somewhat minent working member of the coopers' union. as been out on strike with his fellow coopers for bout six weeks. His wife has repeatedly urged im, for the sake of his little ones, to abandon the ociety and go to work for his old employers. Pratt & Cc., who were willing to pay him $3 50 per day. Dwyer held out, however, persistently relusing to do anything at variance with the rules of the union. She pleaded that the children were in want of many articles. of May. She was very sensitive about keeping up her credit, being honest in every dealing, and her inability to meet the bills which were due caused her much mental anguish, over which she brooded. consequent upon his determination not to go to ork until the society sanctioned such a proceeding. At an early hour yesterday morning, about two o'clock, Michael Dwyer returned to his apartments, which consisted of part of the second floor of a neat three story brick tenement house, No. 35 North Eighth street, Eastern Ustrict. He had been drinking some beer, but was not intoxi-cated. He gave his wife, who had been silently watching through the long night hours for his coming, the pittance of $3, which he received from the trades union to help to keep body and soul together. He told his wife that the strike had ended, and in the morning he would go to in the front room, and she went to bed with her children, who slept in a dark becroom adjoining the apartment named. She did not sleep, so anxious was the woman to obtain the earliest copy of a morning journal to inform herself as to whether Michael had been teiling her the truth about the end of the strike being at hand. She arose selore six o'clock, and, going out into the street, purchased the desired paper. He had told her a laisehood. The strike was not over. Then, arousing Michael, she accused him of wifully lying to her, and warned him that it would be better for all of them if he returned immediately to work and left the coopers' union. He relused, and she continued her threats. About five minutes after six Owen Murphy entered their apartment and begged Michael to return to work. The wife added her entreaties to Owen's Friendly advice, but Dwyer continued obstinate. When Murphy left, the wife, crazed with anger, procured a cooper's hammer, and creening steating to the head of the course. in the front room, and she went to bed with I entreaties to Owen's iriendly advice, but Dwyce continued obstinate. When Murphy left, the wife, crazed with anger, procured a cooper's hammer, and creeping steatthily to the head of the founge where her husband lay, dealt him a terrible blow on the forehead. The man sprung to his feet, but before he could ofter resistance he received another crashing stroke hear the base of the sauli, the then ran shreking out of the apartment and into the room occupied by Mrs. Slavin and her husband, on the same foor. As soon as she had closed the door leading into the half, Mrs. Dwyer resolved to murder her children. Dropping the hammer, she selzed a huge smoothing iron, and, thus armed, entered the bedroom where the little ones were sleeping soundly. Ten she had closed the door leading into the half, Mrs. Dwyer resolved to murder her children. Dropping the hammer, she selzed a huge smoothing iron, and, thus armed, entered the bedroom where the little ones were sleeping soundly. Ten minutes later, when she left that room, Magrie, Jemmy and baby Tim were dead. The woman followed Michael into Mrs. Slavin's room, and again attempted to strike him on the head with the hammer, and would, it is believed, have killed him outright were it not for the intervention of Mr. Slavin, who seized the maniac woman and wrenched the murderous weapon from her hand. She then returned to her room, and was preparing to leave the house, intending, as she says, to give herself over to the custody of the police, when the officers made their appearance on the Scene of the EUCHENY.

After Mrs. Dwyer left Mr. Slavin's apartments her husband, notwithstanding his skin was fractured in two places, managed to totter down stairs to the sidewak, where he met Sergeant Fielding, of the Pith precinct police, who summoned Patrolmen Moclue and Hynes and sent them into the house to arrest Mrs. Dwyer for assaulting her husband, mow the time, was not aware of the killing of their three children. The officers were horrined on beholding the demonsiac work which had been enacted but a few minutes before their arrival. The bare floor of the room was bespattered with brains and blood, while dangling from the side of the bed within were the mangled forms of the three children named.

In the midst of her destructive work sat Mrs. Dwyer. Her arms were crossed upon her breast and there was a stoical expression upon her counterage of the children hamed. The difference of the bed within were the mangled forms of the chicers who told her to rise. Lying close by her side were the instruments of her burchery—a nuge nammer and flatiron—both of which were red and dripping, and upon the head of the edicast child, Maggie, were found five deep gashes, each bearing the imprint of rhe from the side of the sead was cut openme

At the station house lawyer. At the station house bower, in conversation with a reporter, said:—"she wanted me to get up and go to work, and I said. Watt a day of two longer and there will be work. The rent was what troubled her. There was one month's rent due, we had paid it up honestly the month before. The landford never bothered us at all, although he is a poor man himself. The rent troubled her more than it did me. She always wanted to may all she owed. A better woman never lived; but she is a murderer now and I would not live with her again. I forgive her. I worked for Mr. Fratt, and have been out of work for about a month. I wanted to suck by the sociaty men, and signit toout. They did not control life. I joined the international Union about twelve months ago. I was born in the county of Tipperary, Ireland, and am torty years old. We were married about the year 1867, in Bristol, Rhode Island. My wife was born in county Kildare, Ireland."

A reporter had the following interesting interview with Mrs. Dwyfer.

lew with Mrs. Dwyer con arday morning:— wire Mrs. Dwyer. Interview wire Mrs. Dwyer. Reporter—Mrs. Dwyer, do you realize your a marderess. position?

Mrs. Dwyrn-Perfectly, sir. I am a murderess. I have defled the law; but my little ones, thank God, are in neaven. I have often felt like killing myself, and I knew that if I went first and left them behind me they would never reach heaven. You see, sir, my husband wouldn't go to work. I warned him to ro and yet he persisted, and my brain is not quite right sometimes, and that's the way it happened.

Reposites—Have you lived pleasantly with your hasband?

Mrs. Dwyer.—Well, yes; but I don't think we had any great love for each other. I was only eighteen when I was married, and he was much older than that. But I can bonestly say that I feel a comfort to know that my children are in heaven. Wasn't it the Lord who sent down His only son to die? Well, I took the lives of my children, but it was for their souls' sake. First, I killed the baby—my little lim; he was one year, and nine montas old. The reason I took the baby first was because he was lying nearest to me. He made some noise—I think he cried quite hard, but it din't last long. I hit Maggie second. She woke in and said, "Mamma." I said, "It's me, Maggie was a good gir. She told me many times she wanted to go to heaven. Once I asked her whether she would call her whether she would call her whether she would call my limes she wanted to go to heaven. Once I asked her whether she would call my limes and wanted to go to heaven. Once I asked her whether she would call my limes and wasted her whether she would call my limes and wasted her whether she would call my limes and wasted her whether she would call my limes and wasted her whether she would call my limes and wasted her whether she would call my limes and wasted her whether she would call my limes and many times she wanted to go to heaven. Once I asked her whether she would call my limes and my limes and limes her was limes to live the blood run out of his head faster. They to let the blood run out of his head faster. They to let the blood run out of his head faster. They to let the blood run out of his head faster. They to let the blood run out of his head faster. They to let the blood run out of his head faster was ended in the she was limed to live and my children. The world was going to have work, and the coopers' strike was bad. Coroner Whitehall viewed the bodies, which were coffined and removed to an undertaker's store in the vicinity, from whence they will be buried to-day. The inquest will be held this evening.

SENTENCE OF A BOY MURDERER.

LITTLE VALLEY, N. Y., June 2, 1874. Boorne, aged fifteen, who was indicted at the last Court of Oyer and Terminer in this county for the murder of his stepfather, Caleb Omans, by chopping him to pleces with an axe, at Steamburg, in January last, to-day withdrew his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree. Judge Barker sentenced Boorne to imprisonment at Auburn Prison for life. The murder was committed while both parises were intoxicated. Boorne received his sentence with the utmost indufference.

THE NORMAL COLLEGE.

The annual examination for admission to the Normal College was continued yesterday. The subjects in which the scholars were examined yesterday were history, grammar and spelling, one hour being devoted to each study. Five or more printed questions relating to each of these branches are placed before the scholar, who abswers them in writing. At the end of the examination all the papers are examined and all candidates who have answered seventy-five percent of the the questions correctly are admitted to the college. The young ladies have all attained their fifteenth year, and, to judge from the manner in which they have acquitted themselves thus far, many of them will undoubtedly make acceptable teachers in our public schools. To-day they will have to read alond and show how well they can write. On Monday next will begin the examination of the graduating class of the College. more printed questions relating to each of these

COLLEGE OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

The examination of candidates for admission was concluded yesterday. The applicants were examined in English grammar, spelling, reading, writing, algebra, arithmetic, geography and history of the United States. The papers seemed to be prepared with great care, and are well calculated to disclose the exact amount of proficiency of their writers. A marked improvement was noted over previous years, which may be credited to the new rule requiring applicants to be four-teen years old. The papers are now in the hands of the examiners and the results will be declared on Saturday, June 8, in the college chapet.

REVOLT IN A PENITENTIARY.

Prisoners Complain of an Incometant Quantity of Food-A Compromise Effected and Discipline Restored. Sr. Louis, Mo., June 2, 1874,

Special despatches from Jefferson City, at a late hour last night, say a mutiny, which at one time threatened to be quite serious, occurred in the Penitentiary yesterday. During the dinner hour several convicts simultaneously sprang from their seats at the table, and, with drawn knives, ordered the five or six guards present to stand still at the perit of their lives, which they did. Mr. Bradbury, one of the officers of the prison, entered the room, and was immediately ordered to be seated and remain quiet. Shortly after Warden Labree entered and made a speech to the convicts, which quieted them to the extent that they released Mr.

queeted them to the extent that they released Mr. Bradbury and the guards.

THE CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE, as stated by the convicts, was the bad quality of the food unraished them.

At the request of Colonel Murphy, President of the Prison Company, a committee of prisoners went with him to the Commissioners' quarters, where the quality of the rations was examined. This seemed satisfactory to most of the convicts, but some of them still insisted that the food was not good, and complained that the quantity allowed was not sufficient for hard working men. Colonel Murphy assured them they should have an abundance to eat and of good quality, and comparative quiet was restored.

A second Revolt,

tive quiet was restored.

A SECOND REVOLT.

however, broke out in the shoe shop during the afternoon, and threats were made to burn the prison. It was the determination to force the convicts into their cells, and at this juncture a company of armed citizens arrived, and, marching into the prison, drew up in line, ready to fire at the slightest demonstration of disobedience. This had a quieting effect even on the most turbulent, and in a few minutes all were benind bars and bolts, a general amnesty having been first decreed by the officers of the prison.

THE VETERANS OF 1812.

By invitation of the management the veterans of the war of 18.2 visited, the Colosseum vesterday afternoon. A more appreciative audience could not well be found, and the genuine gratification the several exhibitions gave was shown by their frequent an hearty exclamations of applicates. After the close of the entertainment a speech was made by General Raymond extending to the management the best thanks of the veterans for the kind invitation, remarking that it was the carnest wish of the veterans that the hands of Englishmen and Americans should never more be imbued in each other's blood, but that all difficulties between them—the two most enlightened countries in the world—should be settled by arbitration. A suitable response having teen at the world of command, outside the Colosseum and deported, cheering on their way.
